

Naomi Lloyd is the presenter and producer of Euronews' Real Economy programme, where she interviews key decision makers including heads of state, Finance Ministers and EU Commissioners.

Previously, she was a producer for BBC World TV, a newsreader for BBC Radio, and part of the BBC team in Paris covering the 2017 French presidential elections. She has also been a news anchor for France 24, reporting on business stories and presenting financial news updates; a reporter for Reuters TV in London, covering political events at Westminster; a reporter for EuroparlTV in Brussels, interviewing MEPs and explaining new legislation for the 'How It Works' series; and a freelance correspondent in Paris. She started out producing financial news bulletins for ITN's online news and as reporter and presenter in UK regional TV.

She holds an honours degree in literature and philosophy, and a postgraduate diploma in broadcast journalism from City University, London.
