

Event Speaker Biography

Katre Trofimov

Head of Person-Centered eHealth, Ministry of Social Affairs, Estonia

Katre Trofimov has been working in the Ministry of Social Affairs, Estonia, Health System Development Department since 2021 June. Since August 2022 as Head of Person-Centered eHealth in the team of New Generation Health Information System. Before that as chief specialist of health workforce (HWF) planning and qualification. She has participated in EU projects related to HWF (TaSHI, HEROES, TSI digital skills) as well participated in preparation of 4 project applications.

She is an expert with interest in developing person-centered healthcare with the aim of empowering people taking steps towards having and taking the responsibility on their own health, increasing health literacy, finding new and quality ways for supporting disease prevention and recovery, as well living with chronic conditions. It is especially important at the times of ageing population, shortage of health work force and need of shortening the times for receiving medical treatment as such. It is essential to understand how and which digital competences and skills in healthcare can be considered as transferable skills which are needed for digital reforms.

Professional: Civil servant in the Ministry of Social Affairs Estonia (since June 2021); NGO management, strategy and leadership in patient organisations at national and European level (since 2013); Private sector background in national and European region as development and sales manager (13 y);

Education: Public sector management (BA), Public sector management and innovation (MA ongoing)