

Alexia Kefalas is a Franco-Greek journalist and a correspondent for Le Figaro and for France 24 in Greece. She also collaborates for a number of French and French-speaking media. She has notably conducted interviews with several Greek prime ministers, Cypriot Presidents and has covered political, economic and migration issues extensively in the region. In Greece, she collaborated with the daily Ta Nea, for which she has carried out interviews with a number of French heads of State as well as analysis and writers. She is a member for the jury for the European Book Prize, awarded each year by the European Parliament.